Tamarack Mountain Sports Education Team (TMSET) Announces New Alpine Ski Coach

TMSET is proud to have Barrett Stein join the Tamarack Mountain Sports Education Team (TMSET) as Head Alpine Coach. Barrett will lead the team in athlete development, training, clinics and races. Barrett has an extensive background in ski racing. His career accomplishments as a former USSA racer led him to a coaching career at Buck Hill, MN; Telluride and Aspen Valley, CO; Falls Creek, Australia; Czech Republic National Team; Chief of Course, X Games and Disabled World Cup Finals; as well as the U.S. Olympic Committee Paralympic Alpine Development Director. Barrett is a proven leader with innovative ideas and discipline to take an organization to the next level. He successfully passed written and ski exams as a Level 3 Professional Ski Instructors of America and attended the UNIVERSITY OF NEW MEXICO in Albuquerque, NM.

This inaugural year, TMSET will train youth in the skills of alpine skiing so that they will be able to compete at a level that allows them to reach their full potential as they develop through childhood to use these skills into adulthood for participation in life-long sports activities.

Tamarack Mountain Sports Education Team (TMSET), a non-profit organization, facilitates education that encourages life-long fitness and excellence in snow sports serving youth. The mission of TMSET is to encourage healthy development of the whole athlete. The goals are to encourage excellence in academics, athleticism, and social development through professional snow sports training and competition.
